

Dear Eric,

I just finished your book Finding Your Voice. My name is Corinne and I am 11 years old. I had many opinions on parts of the story. I will be honest and point out certain parts of the story.

First, I liked the use of quotes. There were quite a few instances where quotes were used. They showed different things adding up to the factor of finding your voice. One quote was "Tyranny of the majority". I like how the story explains the quotes so you understand how it relates to the story.

Next, I liked the use of certain characters. It has different characters with different personalities. At Middtown High, there are girls who are enthusiastic and determined. There is Mr. Clarke who is a helping teacher with good advice. Jeremy, who learns to speak up and find his voice. It shows all the personalities and points of view which is good.

One more thing is the way the characters ask questions the readers might ask.

The characters ask questions and are even confused at some points like the reader. Some one respond though and they help you understand.

I really hope you take my words and opinions and use them for future stories. Thank you for helping me understand finding your voice and freedom of speech.

Sincerely,
Corinne
